

VisionPro Deployment Systems

Enclosed please find your Cognex deployment system, consisting of either:

- A Cognex frame grabber
- A licensing dongle, also called a security key, that connects to a USB or parallel port on your PC

Be aware that Cognex also offers VisionPro software licenses that use software based licensing technology and therefore do not require any Cognex hardware be installed or connected to your PC.

Deployment systems do not contain the VisionPro software CD. If you do not have access to a VisionPro software CD, either through a previous download or a Starter Kit, you can download any release of VisionPro from the VisionPro support site:

<http://www.cognex.com/support/VisionPro>.

Access to the "Downloads" section of the VisionPro support site requires an active Software Update Program (SUP) agreement. In case your SUP agreement has expired or you do not have one, please contact your Cognex sales representative.

The latest VisionPro release is also available through the VisionPro 30-day Trial software. This will install a fully functional version of software provided you have a valid VisionPro license, either through a frame grabber, a dongle, or a software license.

You must install the Cognex frame grabber or attach the dongle to run VisionPro software on your PC. For details on frame grabber installation, see the appropriate hardware manual available from the "VisionPro Documentation" section of the VisionPro support site.

Once the hardware has been installed, install the VisionPro software. For details, see the VisionPro Quick Reference guide, also available from the "VisionPro Documentation" section of the VisionPro support site.

Thank you,

Cognex Corporation
